THE STORY BEHIND THE COVER

(Mainly, this story is really behind the cover!)

Once again, MAD Magazine, in its ceaseless campaign to bring culture to America, scores a resounding artistic triumph with the publication of the first magazine cover ever painted by a chimpanzee. By bringing before the discerning public eye the talented work of J. Fred Muggs, MAD hopes that it has earned for him his rightful place among other truly great cover artists like Norman Rockwell, Steven Dohanos and Grandma Moses.

UP-TO-DATE ALPHABET BOOK..... 6

Let the kids learn their ABC's from this modern up-to-date alphabet book, and, G's, U will C how quickly they all Y's up.

MIKE MALICE..... 10

MAD's impression of the famous TV interview program where each guest's background seems to show up as a pretty black one.

OUTSTANDING AMERICANS..... 15

MAD turns the spotlight on Arthur A. Freen, one of America's great unsung heroes, croons his story, and strikes a sour note.

STRANGELY BELIEVE IT..... 19, 31

Once again, Ernie Kovacs allows us to use some of his foolishness in MAD, which is pretty foolish any way you look at it.

BABY SITTING..... 27

Here's a business which seems ripe for racketeers to move in on, so MAD wastes no time and moves in on it with an article.

ENDORSEMENTS..... 36

Ad-men feel a well-known person's endorsement will help sell their product. We feel an article about this will help sell MAD.

BANNISTER SLIDING..... 38

Bob and Ray's report on this little - publicized sport shows its thrills, its spills, its chills, and mainly why it's not.

BITTER HOMES AND GARDENS.... 43

WINSTEN AD

I must say that the Winsten Cigarette ad on the back cover of your January issue was one of the most delightful bits of satire on advertising that I have ever seen. Congratulations on what I'd say was a most cleverly done job.

George F. French
Berkely, Calif.

You have never made a better satire advertisement than the Winsten ad. It had me in stitches for hours.

Myron Bloom
Freeport, N. Y.

I have loved Alfred E. Neuman ever since I first saw his face in MAD. But now I must confess I love someone else. Two fellas, as a matter of fact! Who are the two boys in the Winsten ad?

Barbara S.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

Who are they?

The Postman is Nick Megliola, and the guy in the sweater is Jerry De Fuccio, members of MAD's editorial staff.—Ed.

What do the letters B, H, and C stand for on the guy's sweater?

J. Vogdes
East Brunswick, N. J.

Jerry informs us that the letters stand for "Boston Hockey Club". The sweater was given to him by a girl who got it from a guy on the team.—Ed.

GENERAL COMMENTS

By reading MAD since its 10¢ days, I have acquired much valuable information and knowledge. Indeed, I have learned how to cope with all the problems and situations arising from life in this modern world. Only one thing still occasionally troubles me, mainly: How many issues in a volume?

Richard Skolnik
New York, N. Y.

Your magazine has replaced the Sears Roebuck catalogue at our house.

Bill Sullivan
Beaumont, Texas

I've been reading MAD for three years now, and I haven't yet come across anything that makes sense!

Richard Stratton
Bayport, N. Y.

How in heck do you guys think up all them crazy names you use in the mag?

Thadeus Gontarski
Charlestown, Mass.

Anyone who has nothing better to do than write a letter to you screwy guys must be an idiot!

Dick Manlin
St. Louis, Mo.

I have been writing to you clods for a long time, telling you what a hopeless failure your mag is, and you've never printed my letters. So this time, I've decided to praise (ugh) you. This time, I gotta hand it (ugh) to you. The mag was (ugh) hilarious.

Guy Berry
Havertown, Pa.

Flattery will get you somewhere!—Ed.

Without which you can't rock;
Without which dear ol' Alan Freed
Might now be deep in hock.

U

is for Union

Of late, they're in the news;
The rank and file strike for a raise,
The "Boss" takes his from dues.

V

is for vodka

Its combinations vary:
Tomato juice and Geritol...
A "Tired Bloody Mary"!

Y

is for Yul

That Brynner's really hot.
And, funny thing, he makes a hit
With something he ain't got.

Z

is for zip-gun

The world would be real cool
If guys who make 'em used their brains
For better grades in school.

MIKE FRIGHT DEPT.

Divorcee... post-graduate in the School of Love.

There had been hard-hitting television interviewers before, but when this new one appeared on the scene, he put them all to shame. He's Mike Malice, and his technique seems to be to disarm his guests with unexpected and shockingly personal questions while the TV camera moves in for a tight close-up, picking up every wrinkle, blemish, pimple, pore, bead of sweat and nervous twitch of his uncomfortable victim. Now, this makes for great television. Trouble is, the viewer is so fascinated by these revealing close-ups, he doesn't hear one word of them shocking questions and answers. So this article will let you study the close-ups, and still give you a chance to concentrate on them questions, as...

MIKE

Good evening, Mrs. Goose!

Good evening, Mike!

Thank you for coming!

It's my pleasure!

Shall we get down to business?

All right! Let's...

It has been alleged, Mrs. Goose, that under the guise of being a children's nursery rhyme writer, you are, among other things, a propagandist for the Communists?

HAH?

Are you evading the question?

I'm a... HAH?

All right! Let's go on to the next question!

It has been charged, Mrs. Goose, that when you wrote... and I quote: "The cow jumped over the moon...", you really were inferring that inflation and price-gouging in our democratic country has sent meat prices sky-high? Isn't that true?

Land sakes... I...

When you wrote, "Jack, jump over the candlestick!", weren't you really implying that people are so poor in this country, they can't even pay their electric bills, and are forced to use candles. Isn't that so?

My stars, I... I...

Talking about stars, Mrs. Goose, when you wrote, "Twinkle-twinkle, little star... how I wonder what you are?", wasn't that your way of teasing the administration about Russia's winning the satellite race with SPUTNIK?

I was only trying to entertain children...

Do you call this entertaining children? "Tom, Tom, the piper's son, stole a pig!" or "The knave of hearts, he stole those tarts!" or "Upstairs, downstairs, in my lady's chamber..."? Wouldn't it be closer to the truth to call it "contributing to the delinquency of minors"? "Undermining America's youth"? "Disloyalty"? "Treason"?

MALICE

INTERVIEWS MOTHER GOOSE

What you are about to witness is a completely unrehearsed, completely uncensored, completely unbiased, and completely unnecessary interview! My name is Mike Malice. The cigarette is named Morris Philip. The program is named in a law suit!

All right! Let's go on! I quote: "Old Mother Hubbard went to the cupboard to get her poor dog a bone. When she got there, the cupboard was bare..." Now isn't that a thinly disguised way of saying that old people in this country are left to starve? That nobody cares about them? That Social Security is a complete and utter failure?

Sufferin' catfish! I...

Let me read you this! Again I quote your own words! "See-Saw, Marjorie Daw, Jack shall have a new master. He shall earn a penny a day, because he can't work faster!" Wouldn't you agree that this is a slur on working conditions in this country, Mrs. Goose?

Well, I really...

Oh, come now, Mrs. Goose...

Well, won't you even admit that you have made insidious comments about housing conditions in the U.S.? I mean... people living in old shoes and pumpkin shells...

Heavenly day, I just...

Really, Mrs. Goose! Own up!

When I wrote those, I...

Mrs. Goose, you haven't answered my questions! Do I take this as an admission of guilt...?

I refuse to answer on the grounds that it might tend to incriminate me!

Thank you, Mother Goose, for coming and talking to us!

Thank you, Mr. Malice!

It was a pleasure having you.

The pleasure... choke... was all mine!

Tonight, we have spoken with Mother Goose, whose poems are undeniably woven into the fabric of our childhood ideas. Fortright in her opinions, Mrs. Goose proved to be a generous, kind, sweet, harmless, gentle soul, whose one purpose in life seems to be a forthright determination to entertain our young people... and maybe wreck our nation. This is Mike Malice. Goodnight.

WE PUSH DISCUSSION-- NOT CONTROVERSY!

THE "EYES" HAVE HAD IT DEPT.

This article is in answer to an urgent appeal sent us by the "National Foundation of Real Life Day-In-and-Day-Out Private Eyes" to clear up the misconceptions about the profession that current Detective Fiction is creating. The president of the NFRDLIDOPE (whose signature looks like Gmmmn W. Egmmmn) is particularly upset about novels like Mickey Spitoon's best sellers,

"Gore Me Sexy," "Sex Me Gory," etc. . . . According to Mr. Egmmmn, this kind of writing, though technically accurate, tends to conjure up pictures in the reader's mind which are very far afield from the real daily life of a real Private Eye. So, as a public service, we here at MAD herewith present the text of Mr. Spitoon's latest novel, along with the mental images you should be getting as you read

This is a big town. There are a lot of cruds in this town. Guys who'll lie and cheat and even kill for a fast buck. And I'm one of them!

Mike Chisel is the monicker. I'm a Private Eye.

There was still a muscle-hard 200 pounds of me left as I caught my first winks of sleep in 17 days, shaved, dressed, showered, stowed away a meal, and checked back in at the office after wrapping up the Shackelford caper.

My head felt like a wet sandbag from the diet of Dry Bourbon Stingers I'd been on for the past two weeks. Thoughts of the little hat check girl at "21" and that night on the davenport in Davenport kept pushing their way up out of the fog in my brain and into my conscious. But I shook them off.

I sat down at my desk and started cleaning my heater for action.

Her name was Diane Wilkinson, a handle that fit her as snugly as the sweater she wore. She told me that her husband had hired a torpedo named "Snake" del Rocco to do away with her. She'd already had one close brush with never-never land when "Snake" tried to run her down in the street outside her swanky mansion. I felt my heart do handsprings in my chest when Diane lifted her skirt to show me the marks left from the first run-in with "Snake."

A buzz saw was still ripping away at my brain from the 34 Creme de Menthe Old Fashioneds I'd poured into my lower recesses the night before.

"Sorry, Baby," I snapped. "I'm in no shape for another caper!"

"You look in pretty good shape to me," Diane whispered.

She came real close and reached into her purse. My head started to whirl as she counted out a retainer.

BLOOD, GUTS, A ROSCOE & YOU

by Mickey Spitzo

I didn't have to wait long for trouble to beat a path to my door. Sexina, my girl Friday, oozed into the room, her lips slightly parted in an "I-want-to-be-wanted" look. She mumbled incoherently, and I finally figured out she was trying to tell me that a client was waiting in the outer office. I guess it's pretty hard to talk with your lips slightly parted. I made a mental note to see a lot more of Sexina and told her to send the sucker in.

Little men with trip-hammers were still pounding on my temples from the 26—or was it 27—Vermouth Boxcars I'd put away the night before, and the idea of starting out on another caper didn't appeal to me. But I gave the thing some fast reconsideration when I glanced up.

She was very tall, and very blonde. And she gave off a scent of perfume that I didn't have to identify to know the reason for.

PICTURES BY GEORGE WOODBRIDGE

After she drifted out, leaving behind a fragrance of bruised roses, I checked the name Wilkinson in the phone book, and found it to be a fashionable East Side address.

I downed a straight shot of Irish to quiet the 41 Curacao Frappés of the night before that were still churning around inside me, and headed over that way.

I knew from the start it was going to be a rough case. The driver eyed me suspiciously as I handed him a twenty.

The Wilkinson town house was one of those places that oozed money, a stately old mansion that reminded you of what this town must have been like before the grafters and the hoods and the cops took over.

I edged up to what I thought was a bedroom window, and caught sight of a half-clothed figure that made me forget the 54 shots of Kummel-on-the-rocks from the night before that were still doing bumps and grinds in my belly.

I was soaking up an eyeful when a chill ran up my spine as if somebody'd just dropped a Popsicle down my shirt. A figure was moving in the shrubbery not ten feet away! Still nursing one lump on my noggin from the Shackelford caper, and not anxious to pick up another one, I whipped out my roscoe and fired at the shadowy form...

Kazowie... Kazowie... Kazowie...

He let out one short cry and fell dead at my feet.

I glanced down at the blood-spattered corpse with the hole where his guts used to be, and my heart was a 50¢ block of ice. There's no room for emotion in my racket. Once you let it in, you're all washed up.

The racket I'd stirred up with my busy .45 brought quick action from somewhere behind me.

I felt the crunch of raw metal bury itself into my scalp, and then everything went black.

When the lights flickered on again, I felt as if the Army-Navy game was being played between my ears.

I staggered to my feet and looked around. There was a dingy bar down the street. I slammed in, braced myself with more Rum Sours than I should have had, and headed back to the office.

What I found when I arrived told me again that there was more to this caper than I'd bargained for:

I marked the case closed, and went out into the cool night air.

There's something lonely about a city at night, when the streets are deserted and a stillness hangs over everything except for the occasional far away cry of a baby with a soiled diaper.

I tried hard to put Diane Wilkinson out of my mind, and started concentrating on my next assignment.

The First In A Series

ARTHUR A. FREEN

From Garage Mechanic to Automotive Genius

STORY AND PICTURES BY DON MARTIN

Young "Art" first came before the public eye in 1934 during a demonstration of the new Packard H-47 engine.

Freen suggested that greater speed could be attained by simply connecting the cam toggle to the litter bolt-head.

Packard engineers watched in awe as the young mechanic made the proper adjustments for his revolutionary idea.

Any other man would have been discouraged by this sound defeat . . . but not Freen. To him, this was a challenge!

Only a few months later, Arthur Freen came forth with a plan for hooking a Biddle stabilizer to the axle stead.

It was because of Arthur Freen's startling demonstration of this revolutionary new idea on September 28, 1934 . . .

. . . that Studebaker discarded the idea once and for all.

Two years later, Arthur Freen returned to the limelight, this time with a car which he claimed would do 180 MPH.

"All I did was widen the spindle shaft," announced Freen. (An idea Chrysler had been working on for six months!!)

Needless to say, Chrysler immediately gave up the idea!

It was Arthur Freen who proved conclusively it wouldn't!

In 1940, when General Motors decided that more horse-power would result if the breaker gasket were enlarged . . .

Then, as time went by, little was heard from Arthur A. Freen. Only once . . . some ten years later, in Kokomo . . .

Until late in 1957, when Arthur A. Freen, automotive genius, appeared once again with a revolutionary idea . . .

SCORING

Add 5 for every "Yes" answer.
Subtract 3 for every "No" answer.

UNDER ZERO

A score below zero shows that you are a typically old-fashioned, emotionally mature-type clod. So, you had better straighten yourself out, or you will wake up one morning so fully adjusted you'll be the laughing stock of your whole neighborhood. Now is the time to get out of your healthy rut and start getting some real anxieties and fears of your very own. Only in this way will you be able to take your rightful place in this sick, sick world of ours.

ZERO TO 50

A score between zero and 50 indicates that you have already started to develop a wholesome-type neurosis, but that there are still some deep-rooted healthy desires in your subconscious which are holding you back from realizing your full neurotic potential. We would suggest that you immediately begin to fight off this inner drive by practicing some time-tested hostile habits. For example, you can start by doubting everything. Then you can become suspicious of your neighbor. Get a little anti-social. Crack up once in a while. Running amok in a Public Library works wonders for beginners.

50 TO 75

A score between 50 and 75 shows that you are a fully-developed MAD-type neurotic, which makes you interesting and sophisticated. Such a guy, we like.

OVER 80

A score of over 80 shows that you are definitely psychotic. It also shows that you suffer from schizophrenia. It also shows that you have paranoiac delusions of grandeur. But mainly, it shows that you can't even add right—because the score only goes up to 75.

 Egocentric . . . a person who believes he is everything you know you are.

We converted our patio into a backyard

BEFORE: Patio was an eyesore and a catch-all as well for all the neighborhood fanciers of barbecue and free beer. The Burnstores decided to do something about it.

By Durwood "Greasy" Burnstore

I was busily transplanting snapdragon shoots one afternoon last summer when my wife, Boodie, turned to me and said, "Hey, Meat Head! Whudda we need this patio for? I mean—you know—what's with a patio, anyway? Am I right—or am I wrong? Whaddya say, Meat Head?"

Boodie, of course, had been drinking again. Nevertheless, the idea began to toss itself around in my mind. Other people in our neighborhood had backyards. Maybe we could have one too—with some "do-it-yourself" effort on my part. The more I thought of the idea, the more I liked it. No more smelly barbecues; no more playing host at dull outdoor parties; no more worries about Boodie falling down and hitting her head on the bricks when she was drunk—which was most of the time these days.

The first thing I did was to purchase some dynamite,

Despite the opposition of free-loading neighbors, Burnstores undertook the arduous task of converting useless patio into a backyard.

Neighbors still make infrequent attempts to hold barbecues in the Burnstore backyard, but now are kept at bay by rats and other such pests that infest the area. Burnstores plan to add a mosquito breeder next summer.

AFTER: Months of evening and week-end work paid off as the area miraculously became a backyard. Explained Mr. Burnstore, "It was worth all the time and trouble." Added Mrs. Burnstore, "That's right! Urrrp!"

Tear out that extra downstairs bathroom!

Simple remodeling gave home more storage space—and cut water bills in half, by making frequent baths impractical for this family of fourteen

When the Emil Deifendorfers bought their new home just outside of Wretched, Indiana, two years ago, it seemed to fill all the needs of a family of fourteen—except that it had two bathrooms!

"It was like a nightmare," Deifendorfer recalls now. "I could never remember which bathroom I'd left the glass with my teeth in. And our water bill sky-rocketed as our twelve children capitalized on the extra plumbing facilities to take two, or even three baths a week."

A handyman as well as an efficient home manager, Deifendorfer set to work tearing out downstairs bathroom and converting it into much more needed storage space. With the plumbing now removed, he uses the 7 x 9 room as a convenient spot for storing old magazines and used razor blades. Meanwhile, the family thinks twice before getting into line to use the single remaining bathroom upstairs.

BEFORE: There's valuable space going to waste here. Modern fixtures and glass paneling clutter up room and prevent its use as a closet. Convenient location and facilities offer open invitation to squander expensive water.

BEFORE: Tools for wasteful indulgent living were all here. Inevitable results were that family did without a much needed storage space while keeping much cleaner than necessary.

AFTER: Full advantage is taken of available space. Plumbing has been removed and pipes capped to prevent flooding. Ample floor space and high ceilings permit storage of old Life magazines, some dating back to 1936.

AFTER: This is the same room with emphasis now on utility rather than needless luxury. Problem of keeping tile floor clean is solved by making it inaccessible. Deifendorfer did all work himself, but inspiration came from similar room in Langley Collier mansion.

Convert your spare bedroom into a basement

By Ozgood Z'Beard

WORK SPACE: One corner of the newly constructed basement is utilized as laboratory where Doctor can perform experiments that time and space limitations do not permit in his office.

PRIVACY: Dr. Pfluger finds that his new basement provides an ideal spot for getting away from the rest of his family and pursuing his many hobbies.

VERSATILITY: Basement also may be used as exercise and game room. Dr. Pfluger keeps in shape by working out here before making his morning house calls.

More bedrooms than people to fill them in your house? That was the problem facing Dr. Whitney Pfluger only six short months ago.

"When we bought the house," explains Dr. Pfluger, of Monotony, Oklahoma, "I could have sworn we had five children. Imagine my surprise when we moved in and I discovered we only had four. Naturally, it created a spare bedroom problem that we solved with a lot of hard work and almost total lack of know-how."

Using only such basic tools as an axe, a crowbar and a blow-torch, Dr. Pfluger tore out all electric wiring, bricked up walls, covered hardwood oak floors with cement, and ripped off ceilings to expose beams.

The project was so successful that Dr. Pfluger is now hard at work on plans to convert his downstairs knotty pine recreation room into an attic.

CONVENIENCE: Ample storage space in basement permits the Doctor to save items he has no immediate use for, but that he doesn't want to throw away.

RECREATION: The newly constructed basement is far enough away from the rest of the house to permit the Doctor to entertain his friends without annoying other members of the family . . . or the police.

They built their house on a lot

22 INCHES WIDE

Wheelwright home is mistaken by many casual observers for lighthouse with no light. Unique dwelling has earned for imaginative and plucky owners a wide reputation as "Those crazy idiots!"

Imagine the surprise of Ewald C. Wheelwright, of Downpour, Iowa, when he received the deed to the property he had craftily purchased at a Sheriff's auction, and discovered that the 800 square feet of land he'd bought was actually a lot 419 feet long and 22 inches wide located between two office buildings in downtown Downpour.

Creative as well as blundering, Wheelwright began work on plans for construction of a home on his uniquely shaped lot. The results, as pictured on this page, have the townspeople of Downpour talking... mostly about other subjects.

The Wheelwrights, who have grown accustomed to moving sideways in their unusual home, acknowledge one serious oversight in the architectural plans.

Says Mrs. Wheelwright, who has been voted out of the Eastern Star since the home was completed, "When you have a house with rooms lined up one behind the other, you should never put a bathroom in the middle as we foolishly did. Whenever somebody takes a bath, the only way other members of the family can get from one part of the house to another is to go out the front door, around the block, and in the back."

The Wheelwrights also find that their new home has spurred them into making a new host of friends, all tall and thin.

Wheelwrights designed home themselves after architect originally assigned job gave up with an acute case of claustrophobia.

HOW-THE... for the handyman

Immense savings on water bills, plus elimination of lawn sprinkling results from this unique idea. Using ordinary tools and casters from discarded bed or dresser, merely place lawn on wheels. drag to nearby spot where it's raining.

New kind of cigar even fills itself by itself—with ink

The man is watching something revolutionary happen—his unique new Barker 61 literally drinking up ink all by itself by capillary “suction.” He has simply removed the band-clip and set the cigar in the ink bottle upside down.

In just 10 seconds the cigar is full. Now he'll lift the Barker 61 from the ink. No wiping needed because ink can't cling to this special tobacco surface. The perfect item for signing contracts in smoke-filled conference rooms. This totally new use of a cigar is just one of the many wonders of the Barker 61. F'rinstance, you can even fill your cigars with Dry Martinis. Then you'll be able to smoke and drink in one sinful labor-saving operation. Whatever you use it for, you'll like the classy beauty of the Barker 61 Cigar. (Talk about classy, isn't this a classy ad, not even mentioning who the guy is?)
